

Choroidal New Vessels

Moderator: Frank Koch

Monday, September 7, 2009: 11:30 am - 01:30 pm

Is surgical ablation of blood neovessels still useful?

Author: Jean-Paul Amar, Cannes, France

Subretinal surgery has slowly disappeared but 75% of eyes with a subretinal heamatoma are lost. The subretinal drainage of the blood and the surgical ablation of the blood neovessels seem to remain still useful with a quite low rate of complications.